About This Game

Dare to travel the absurd and dangerous Orion Trail, where only the luckiest, bravest, and most stubborn captains will make it all the way to the end. Come face the terrible and weird Synapsion Brain Beast. Cower before the pedantic might of Baxxtor the Instructor. Submit to the overwhelming cuteness of the three eyed Warp Weasel. Become famously incredible or incredibly dead!

Ultra Cool Space Features

- A high-stakes and hilarious journey through the strange, stupid and terrifying locales of the Orion Trail!

- Choose your crew, name them after your friends, and watch them die! Heroically! Or, you know, maybe they'll survive. Anything can happen!

- Tons of random encounters, each with a variety of options and outcomes. You'll probably never encounter the same thing twice! You might, though.

- Away Missions! Send an Officer (with a few of your invaluably expendable Redshirts) into the fray. The rewards are great, but so is the risk…

- Carefully manage your Resources: Food, Fuel, Hull, and Redshirts. Curse loudly as they're whittled away.

- Play to your strengths! Each captain, and officer provide different bonuses to increase your chances of success.

- Succumb to the chaos of the Probability Drive. You can rely on your Crew's abilities, but there are no certainties in space.

- Chiptune soundtrack by Rainbow Kitten.

- Gorgeous retro pixel art.

THE VORTEX

The energy-based aliens living within the vortex take your torpedoes as generous (and tasty) gifts. Flattered, they send some energy-gifts of their own back to you, which tear through the hull like tissue paper. On the plus side, it was a great initial diplomatic c

MAIN DISPLAY

The game is a cross between an idle clicker and a text adventure with random things happening with every choice you make. The difference being that this game is done well enough that I highly recommend it.

Average game completion time is around 8 hours.

The music provides a fitting atmosphere for the game.
